Alabama Legislature.

The regular session of the Alabama Legislature commenced on Monday last. One amongst their first duties we presume will be the election of a Confederate States Senator to succeed Senator Clay. We say to succeed Senator Clay because we do not suppose he can be re-elected. There are a majority of conservative men in the Legislature and it is fair to presume that they will elect another substantial conservative man to serve with Mr. Jemison. When the other party had the power the elected both Senators defeating our popular favorite Tom Watts. We hope they may select some man of known ability who possess the qualifications necessary to make a Statesman. The day for sophomores and politicians has past, we need men who can grapple with the great issues before the country. Let us have no more rewarding of politicians for party service.

The perfecting of our Militia system. The making of some certain provision for the support of soldiers families are questions which will require immediate attention.

Gov. Watts' Tour.

We observe from the Jacksonville Republican and Ashville Vidette that Gov. Watts has been filling his appointments and meeting with fine audiences. We are gratified at this and hope the Governor has availed himself of the opportunity afforded for mingling with the people themselves and ascertaining their opinions and positions. If he has done this and disregarded the statements of prejudiced partisans and politicel leaders, he must be fully satisfied that he has been misled with a people who have been grossly misrepresented. A people who have made as great sacrifices for the cause as any in the Confederacy and a hundred fold more in proportion to their ability than those who have been attempting to charge them with disloyality. Many of them have sacrificed their sons and all the property they possessed on the altar of their country and are yet taunted with disloyality by men who may have contributed a small pittance from their abundance, but who have never shouldered a musket or felt the effects of the war.

These men however did not act with the precipitators in the commencement of this struggle they were co-operationists. They were opposed to seperate State action. They believed that concerted action on the part of the States might have prevented the effort to coerce them and avoided a war. They did not regard those who differed in opinion with them as possessing all the wisdom or all the patriotism in the land, or as having a prescriptive right to all the offices and positions in the country. Nor have they been willing to bow down and acknowledge allegiance to a party whose political sagacity they have never had any confidence. These men have been true to their section under all circumstances. They have stood by their State before and since secession and sustained the Confederacy with their arms and their purses. And no effort of their old political opponents could drive them into a position unfriendly to the South to their homes or to their Government. The few exceptions are mere isolated cases that have been found among men of all the old political parties.

Governor Watts having had an opportunity of seeing for himself how much his friends and supporters in the mountain Counties have done and the sacrifices they have made to sustain the war, we should be glad to have him make a list of appointments for the worthy portions of central and south Alabama. It would be an admirable opportunity for him to exhibit to these men of wealth the lofty patriotism of the poor men of these mountain Counties whose sons and daughters are many of them following the plow with their fathers to provide subsistence for themselves and little children while their fathers and sons have left all to serve their country. Let him appeal to these men of wealth many of whom have been growing rich on the war to open their purses and their crib doors. Let them feed and provide liberally for the families of those brave men who are nobly battling for their country. Give some reliable assurance that their families will not suffer for bread in their absence and there will be less cause for complaints at deserters. And when they have sent as many soldiers and contributed as liberally of their of their means to the support of the war as the mountain counties in the portion of Alabama, they will feel less inclined to talk about the disloyality of a people who have been far ahead of them in genuine self denying patriotism.

We think much good might be done by such a trip especially as the Governor seems now to have the ear of all parties. Those who were never known as his friends before the election hugging him closest since. This may be a favorable ondon of future agreement, or it may not. It certainly reminds us of a story of an old office holder, who being asked what if he was not afraid of losing his position with the change of administration. Oh! no he replied, I should like to see an administration that could change faster than I can.

The Governors patriotic sentiments being now vociferously applauded by all parties and ear chiefly his opponents, we hope he will continue his appointments through other portions of the State.
